LETTER FROM THE EDITOR

“Life starts all over again when it gets crisp in the fall.”

-F. Scott Fitzgerald

Fall at Ohio State brings with it a breath of fresh air and as the leaves start to change and the temperature slowly declines, campus quickly comes alive. The transition from summer to autumn brings with it sensational tailgates, football games that leave you on the edge of your seat or standing cheering with pride, apple picking and pumpkin carving, holidays and family time, and of course none other than Buckeye dentistry unity. Whether you are a fan or not, Ohio State Football gamedays create an energy on campus that is electrifying. Just being with friends or family at tailgates, sports bars or even at The ‘Shoe itself to watch the game can bring with it memories of a lifetime. Later in this issue is a spread on Gameday Spots of Columbus. Whether you are looking to watch Ohio State, other college teams or the NFL, some of these locations are a combination of great food, drinks and atmosphere. Some of my favorite gameday memories have been made in the company of friends and colleagues from dental school at the dental fraternity, Psi Omega. Their tailgates as well as those of Delta Sigma Delta, welcome in all dental and hygiene students, faculty, alumni, and any good friends of the latter.

Of course, with fall comes great responsibilities. The dental school schedule is more rigorous than the summer months and for the upperclassmen in clinic, the time is now to treat patients and work on graduation requirements. But it is enjoying things like pumpkin spice lattes, fresh apples, warm soups, and Halloween candy — not without brushing your teeth immediately after consumption — that can bring us simple joys in life. It truly is chicken soup for the dental student’s soul to take time to carve pumpkins with our ever developing handskills. Last year during the very busy and renowned D2 fall, I took the time with my boyfriend to carve an orthodontic pumpkin patient wearing braces, and what a blast it was to take a break from studying to enjoy what fall has to offer.

Lastly, looking back on each week spent in Postle Hall, I have realized that amongst all the students, faculty and staff there is unabridged unity. It is so exciting to reflect on everyone working together to make great dentists out of us and, of course, ourselves in all our clubs and student groups doing the best we can to make the most of this experience too. Fall at The Ohio State University College of Dentistry is definitely the year’s last and loveliest smile.

District 6&7 Annual Meeting

By : David Gorenz,
Vice President '17

For the first time in a long time, we hosted the District 6 and 7 Annual Meetings here at our very own Ohio State University College of Dentistry. The District 6 cabinet, which includes several of our OSU classmates, planned and put on the meeting under the guidance of the District 6 trustee, our very own Lydia Lancaster. I was looking forward to the meeting ever since Lydia announced over the summer that it was coming back to Ohio State. The opportunity to share our school and city with students from the eleven other schools making up districts 6 and 7 was exciting, and knowing Lydia as a good friend, I could foresee that the weekend was going to be a well-run, first-class meeting with opportunities to have fun, learn about organized dentistry, and network with dental students from around the Midwest.

The meeting began on Friday evening as students from the eleven visiting schools arrived in Columbus. Lydia and Erin Fraundorf, the District 7 trustee from the University of Louisville School of Dentistry, welcomed everyone to Postle Hall with classy gift bags, a tasty catered dinner, and presentations on a couple topics. One of the topics on the agenda was the new district mentorship program that will pair up dental students in the district with pre-dental students in the area. We learned about the benefits of the mentor/mentee relationship, and were given tips on how to best utilize this program. We also heard talks by leaders at the other dental schools about their chapter achievements and how they went about improving their chapters. This part was especially interesting to me as I'm always looking to better our chapter as the vice president. Plus it was fun just to hear about what's going on in the other chapters. The Friday meeting concluded with a chance to meet and discuss ideas with the other students in our district, and then a trip to Callahan's on Park St. for the ODA Bash social, which was fun as it is every year.

By Saturday morning, the ASDA fever was palpable. Meetings were held in the Franklin Room at the Hyatt downtown, and students were greeted by another gift bag full of ASDA goodies. We enjoyed talks from various speakers on different topics, most of which were focused on our future as dentists. We heard from Jason Watts, the past Vice President of ASDA, about kicking off our careers with success after graduation. It was helpful, especially for the third and fourth years in attendance, to hear about getting jobs after dental school. We also received a talk from Dr. Tom Paumier and Dr. Joseph Crowley, leaders in the ODA and ADA, about the future of dentistry and the new task force in the ADA. Dr. Joe Crowley has been very active and generous with our chapter at the various national events we have attended over the years, so it was exciting to hear about his running for ADA President-Elect. Over the course of the morning, we also heard from ODA Executive Director Dave Oswiany on the importance of advocacy in dentistry, Lydia and Erin on ASDA's Strategic Plan, and in addition to the College of Dentistry's significant support, our very own Dean Lloyd gave a greeting for all assembled.

A productive morning in the books, we headed down to the ODA Annual Session for lunch and then boarded the buses to Psi Omega Dental Fraternity for an ASDA tailgate for the Buckeyes game. The tailgate was a blast and proved to be a big hit among the visiting dental students. I personally enjoyed getting to meet many of the students from the other dental schools, and it was fun to share clinic stories and experiences with the other D3's that I met. Satisfied with another Buckeye victory, we headed to Bar Louis to continue the socializing and grab some dinner. Saturday proved to be a really fun-filled day, and I am grateful for the opportunity to network and meet so many students from all over the Midwest.

The weekend concluded on Sunday with a breakfast and another morning of presentations. Among the speakers was ASDA Vice President Niveditha Rajagopalan on licensure and ASDA's progress in bringing about changes to the licensure process, and Dr. Jonathon Rich on wealth and debt management for dentists. We also received a very informative presentation by our chapter and district Legislative Liaison Spencer Tepe. With that, the meeting was adjourned and everyone departed to head back to their respective schools, undoubtedly with a renewed ASDA fever, a greater knowledge of current topics impacting dentistry, and some new friends from around the Midwest.

I feel very fortunate to have been able to attend this conference and have the opportunity to network with other students and hear from some great speakers. This was my second time attending districts, and my fourth ASDA conference I've attended, and it surpassed all of my expectations for the weekend. It was great that we were able to get students from all four of our classes involved in the meeting, and I know everyone in our chapter that attended gained much from the meetings. I hope the ASDA fever continues through the semester and our chapter benefits from everything we took from the meetings.

I want to give a big thanks to our District 6 and 7 trustees, everyone involved in the district cabinets, all the speakers that came out, and our sponsors for providing another great ASDA experience! I also want to encourage any members who have not yet had the chance to attend an ASDA conference to apply for our future conferences and get more involved! I promise, the ASDA fever is contagious.

Community Outreach in Dentistry

By: Katie Seymour
Community Outreach Committee Chair '17

During dental school, our schedules are busy – full of labs, studying, and boards. When treating patients in the clinic, we only rarely have opportunities to serve patients outside of the typical school day. Whether it's a screening event at a Head Start program, a health fair at a local school, or an extraction at a free clinic, community outreach opportunities can manifest in many different ways.

“As you grow older, you will discover that you have two hands – one for helping yourself, the other for helping others.” – Audrey Hepburn

Taking advantage of opportunities to engage with the local and global community as a part of outreach programs can help you break the bubble of Postle - you'll interact with faculty in a different environment, bond with your classmates, and put our busy schedules back in perspective. You'll remember that early Saturday morning you went into school for the Give Kids A Smile event, or the elderly lady in a nursing home you helped with her dentures many years after graduation.

Ohio State ASDA members have worked with special needs populations through Special Smiles at the Special Olympics, with kids at a variety of school-based programs, and with geriatric populations at local nursing homes through Smiles for Seniors. While each population has a unique set of oral health care needs, the opportunity to work with each group reminds us of the great privilege and responsibility we have as health care professionals.

Not only do outreach events bring much-needed oral health care services to people who otherwise could not access or afford oral health care, but they also provide an opportunity for students to broaden their understanding of public health disparities – something that is more easily demonstrated in outreach activities than taught in the classroom. These types of experiences during dental school create a generation of dentists who are socially aware and committed to lifelong community engagement.

Community outreach can take a wide variety of forms, which will evolve as we graduate from dental school and become established health professionals in the community. Later in our careers, we will have the time, financial means, and resources to give back to the community in increasingly impactful ways. Whether you give a few hours locally or a few weeks internationally, community outreach can be an enriching component of a successful and fulfilling career in dentistry. Your potential impact can exceed your expectations.

The Ohio State University College of Dentistry: A Celebration of 125 Years of Excellence

By: Urvi Shukla
Secretary '17

On my daily route up to Clinic 1, I walk past the endless class pictures that line the Administration Offices Hall, and I sometimes find myself pausing to catch a glimpse into Postle Hall's history through these antique photographs. As I look at these pictures I am amazed by how many dental students stood in these same halls before me with the same goal in mind: becoming the best healthcare professional they could be. I am also astounded by how much history there is behind the walls of our dental school and how many great practitioners received their dental education here.

This year marks The College of Dentistry's 125th Anniversary—one hundred and twenty five years of producing exceptional dental care to the Columbus community and training proficient dental students since 1890. In the early years the dental, medical and pharmacy colleges were all a part of a single university named Ohio Medical University (OMU). The College of Dentistry was known as the Dental Department, which was a free-standing, private institution.

The Dental Department of OMU (and later The Ohio State University College of Dentistry) has been demonstrating its progressive and culturally advanced academic culture since the beginning of its creation in many ways. For example, in 1896-- just two years after the first dental class graduated--OMU "Medics" played their first football game against the Ohio State Buckeyes. The pre-professional students at that time were definitely not only smart but also athletic! Shortly after, Nina Dunlop and Sophia Kimball become the college's first female graduates in 1900—twenty years before the women gained the right to vote. Two years later another woman named Gillete Hayden graduated from OMU and she would later become the organizer and co-founder of the American Academy of Periodontology in 1914. OMU Dental Department (and later The College of Dentistry) was well ahead of its time and helped create the progressive and research-driven College we see today.

However, the success of the College wouldn't have been without the leadership of Dean Wendell Postle (from whom the building is named). Wendell Postle grew up around Ohio State and his love for this university ran deep within his veins, as his father graduated from OMU's Medical School. He came to Ohio State to attend the College of Dentistry—becoming the first member of his family to graduate from this program. He served as an instructor and then after was named the dean of the College of Dentistry in 1939. At the ripe age of 39, Wendell became the College's youngest dean and served for 25 years.

Dean Wendell Postle was not only passionate about dentistry, but also about football. He was one of the few representatives who served as a representative to the Big 10 athletic conference in 1947 and was part of the group that hired Woody Hayes in 1951 as well. I suppose it is safe to say that Wendell Postle made an impact on the success of the football program as well!

As dean, he was loved by students and faculty alike. He also collaborated with other Deans of the university to raise funds to construct Doan Hall (part of the medical center) as well as the dental school. He was known as a pioneer in dental education and pushed forth efforts to create the College of Dentistry's very first Dental Hygiene program.

With all of this amazing history of Postle Hall in mind, it is important to continue the progressive ideals and vision of Wendell Postle and others who shaped the Ohio State College of Dentistry. The College's 125-year Anniversary reminds us about the dynamic culture of dentistry and how we can look towards the future. As I walk through the Administrative Halls and see the faces of the dental students who graduated before me, I will remember to work hard and contribute all I can towards the future of this profession because together we can also make advances in our field while delivering quality care just as our forefathers envisioned.
